He said, smiling and confidential, "I am one who shits moonlight. You will not." "A real is. . . a real. . ." she repeated helplessly. "They are. . . stories. It's for watching." looked at me, and reddened terribly. The sense of huge strength was draining out of her. She turned her head a little and looked down, surprised to see her own brown arm, her rolled-up sleeve, the grass springing cool and green around her sandaled feet. She looked back at the Patterner and he still seemed a fragile being. She pitied and honoured him. She wanted to warn him of the peril he was in. But no words came to her at all. She turned round and went back to the streambank by the little falls. There she sank down on her haunches and hid her face in her arms, shutting him out, shutting the world out.
